Abstract
New idioms and idiomatic expressions, which are modern stock expressions, constitute communicative clogs in Yorùbá routine discourses because of their semantic complexity and deviant nature. Existing studies have established their scope of usage in Yorùbá music but have hardly addressed their communicative adaptability in politics. This paper investigated issues expressed with these idioms, context and strategies for using them in political arena. This is with a view to establishing their communicative and stylistic relevance in Yorùbá discourses. The paper adopted Mukarovsky’s theory of Standard Language because of its capacity to explain the “differential specifica” between the language of everyday interaction and literary language. Data were collected from different routine communicative discourses of politicians and party members on radio, during political rallies or campaigns and were subjected to pragmatic and stylistic analysis. Political issues were expressed using new idioms and idiomatic expressions in the following sociopolitical contexts: Eté for corruption/stealing; Ojúyọ́ for under achiever; Yóó wọ́lé ékēn si for deceit; Ò bójé tì for collective support; Oyin ni ó for a successful tenure; Ajímísì for collective responsibility; Nàìjá for affection/disappointment and Kári go/Kári kọō mú for continuity and discontinuity. Nominalisation, Pidginisation and dialect expressions were the strategies employed for the formation of new idioms in this paper. These strategies were used to express different political happenings contextualized in underachievement, sloganeering for support, deceit, and acceptance/rejection for second term in office respectively. New idioms and idiomatic expressions, used to express sociopolitical issues in Yorùbá routine communication, occurred in mediated and non-mediated contexts and were conveyed through nominalization, pidginisation, and dialect expressions. These idioms reflect dynamism and modernity-constrained stylistic choices in Yorùbá.

Introduction
This paper was motivated by the saying ‘the world is a global village’ which imposes new global communicative challenges on the Yorùbá people especially the politicians and their followers. The evolution of new idioms and idiomatic expressions thus becomes a coping strategy to meet the new communicative challenges. Globalisation is a phenomenon that filters into all domain of human experience, especially politics. As a result of this, the Yorùbá, politicians like any other politicians in the Third World countries, are faced with the challenges of how to express their ideas and experiences emanating from globalization. These politicians have a duty to inform, enlighten and educate their people about the latest development brought about by the wind of change blowing across the globe. At a time that Nigeria is trying to develop and sustain a democratic system of government, the Yoruba politicians cannot afford to be aloof to this global development. The politicians must be in the forefront of the urgent need to educate Nigerians about new developments in politics. In doing this, they are incapacitated with certain linguistic constraints imposed on them by their language such as the unavailability of words in their language and difficulties in getting appropriate lexical expressions for their ideas. To overcome this, the choice left for politicians according to Babalọlá (1972), Awóbùlúyì (1992:26) and Olateju (2005) is to coin new words or idioms and also to attach new meanings to the existing ones. In this paper, such new coinages, words and expressions are hereby referred to as 'new idioms or expressions'.

By and large, in this paper, attempt was made to address political issues expressed with new idioms and idiomatic expressions in Yorùbá and strategies for using them with a view to establishing their communicative and stylistic potential in Yorùbá discourses.

New Idioms and Idiomatic Expressions
New idioms and idiomatic expressions are quintessentially modern stock expressions, formed in response to the needs of the moment arising as a result of the linguistic constraints of the users which consequently necessitates creation of new words and expressions. They are so called not only because of their complexity which requires the overlapping tendencies of their semantic realizations, but also because of their distinctive difference from old, traditional idioms. As a matter of fact, they straddle metaphor and euphemism and also serve as replication of the established Yorùbá idioms both in form and meaning. They are in spoken and written forms and mainly operate at the lexical and phrasal levels. They are also multi-functional because of their semantic unity. They may equally function as nouns, verbs and adjectives. New idioms and idiomatic expressions are created either through coining, (creating and recreating of new words and expressions) or by investing old words and expressions with new meanings. New idioms are creative, new, strange and fresh by nature. They are not vague expressions and their origins are also known to the users who are always dazzled whenever they come across them in any context.

Existing Studies on New idioms
Few scholars have turned their attention on the study of new idioms and idiomatic expressions in Yoruba. These scholars include Àkànmu (2003) and Olátéju (2005). Some scholars have described idioms as terms referring to words whose meanings cannot be predicted from the individual elements in them (Babalọlá 1972; Bámgbósé 1975; Owólabí 1976; Awóbùlúyì 1992 and Yusuf 2002). These studies have not directly dealt with some issues raised in this paper but they serve as the springboard for this paper.

While discussing idioms and coinages, Babalọlá (1972) states that neologism is used for expressing new items and ideas brought into Yorùbá culture by foreigners. His view bears direct relevance to this study in that, neologism is one of the linguistic strategies employed in the formation of new idioms.

Bámgbósé (1975) identifies vocabulary coining strategies to include nominalization, explication, semantic extension, and loan words, among others. Through this, the Yorùbá lexicon is being expanded. Àkànmu’s (2003) is not specifically on new idioms but it has some semblance of new idioms in the discussion and examples cited. He employed a sociolinguistic analytical method for the interpretation of the work which he referred to as coded language used by certain groups of the Yorùbá society. He cites numerous examples of such expressions that are used in different contexts and discusses their functions in daily activities of the users, even though many of the examples cited as slang are not slang but new idioms used by a considerable number of people.

Olátéju’s (2005) work is a remarkable contribution on new idioms, their formation and interpretation. He examines new idioms and idiomatic expressions from both the linguistic and literary points of view. He adopted Chomskyan Transformational Generative Grammar (TGG) while stylistic and some sociolinguistic variables were used to bring out aesthetic and communicative potential of the new idioms and idiomatic expressions.

Methodological Approach
Data were collected from different routine communicative discourses of some prominent Yorùbá politicians and parties’ members on radio, during political rallies, campaigns, sloganet in Lagos, Ìbàdán and Òṣogbo. These three cities were chosen because of their urbanized nature and the constant usage of new idioms and idiomatic expressions by the politicians. Data were subjected to pragmatic and stylistic analysis.

Standard Language vs Literary Language
The theory of Standard Language was formulated in 1970 by Jan Mukarovsky to solve the problem of relationship between Standard Language (SL) and Literary Language (LL). The suitability of this model lies in the fact that it can be used to explain the differential specifica between the language of ordinary usage and literary expressions as well as using it to explain and interpret the deviant and inventive nature of new idioms and idiomatic expressions.

According to Mukarovsky (1970), Standard Language (SL) is the language of everyday conversation. Its purpose is the understanding between the speaker and the audience with the aim of enhancing effective communication (Crystal, 1997:68). Language of ordinary discourse is casual and devoid of ornamentation. It is unexamined and uncritical. It does not draw attention to itself or open up provocative questions to the nature of its coding. It is often used in schools, on radio, during political campaigns and preaching. Its priority is effective communication which calls for employment of words and phrases that can be fully comprehended. Therefore, to enhance undistorted communication in Standard Language (SL), language must conform to the entire linguistic norms. Concepts crucial to the Standard Language are 'backgroundig' and automatization illustrated by the example below:

\text{Idiomatic:} \quad \text{No story/end of discussion}

The above expression is a phonological creation from the name of a particular non-alcoholic drink in circulation all over the country. The expression 'làkàsórọ́ (la casera) is the standard form that has been foregrounded or de-automatized as 'làkàsórọ́'. In other words, làkàsórọ́ is the artistic form of 'la casera'. There is no expression like 'làkàsórọ́' in the standard language. 'Làkàsórọ́' is automatized and serves as the background from which 'làkàsórọ́' is created and used as an idiom. 'Làkàsórọ́' which can be interpreted as 'no story/end of discussion' is made new, thereby becoming element of surprise because it has violated the Yorùbá lexical formation rules.

Although, foregrounding is logically prohibited in Standard Language, this is not to say that it is not visible in Standard Language as Mukarovsky indicates its possibility in journalistic language where it can be used as subordinate to communication in order to draw the readers' attention more closely to the issue at hand or the item of information articulated. This must have justified the use of new idioms and idiomatic expressions in political routine communicative situation discussed in this paper.

Linguistic Strategies for the Formation of New Idioms

According to Bámgbósé (1975), word formation is a universal linguistic concept that is concerned with the study of the patterns on which a language forms new lexical item. As far as formation of new idioms and idiomatic expressions are concerned in this paper, the linguistic strategies involved in their formation include the following:

i) Nominalisation

Nominalisation is universally known as one of the veritable tools for generating new words in virtually every language. Ruvet (1973: 172) views it as the derivation of a noun phrase from an underlying clause or sentence; or the process of forming a noun from other word classes. Below are some examples of new idioms and idiomatic expressions created from the linguistic process of nominalization.

ii) Pidginisation

According to Muysken (1980), pidgin is a contact language which is an amalgam of linguistic elements of two or more languages and which arises in social and economic transactions between, at least two groups speaking different languages by a process of restriction and simplification of one of the languages of these groups, usually that is in a socially superior position. This process of restriction and simplification is termed Pidginisation. By definition, a pidgin is no one's native language. In the process of becoming notarized, the pidgin undergoes extension and elaboration and thus becomes creolized.

iii) Dialect Expression

Dialect, according to Salami (2006), is a distinct form or variety of a language that is associated with a recognizable regional, social or ethnic groups different from other forms of the language by specific linguistic features such as pronunciation, grammar or vocabulary, especially a variety of speech differing from the standard language or speech pattern of the culture in which it exists. As far as the new idiom is concerned, dialect expression is seen as a dialect variant of word present in the standard language and sometimes used consciously for entertainment. Examples of where dialect are used as idioms and idiomatic expressions include:
The above expression rendered in Ibarapa dialect is often found in the adverts, addresses and speeches of politicians or even, in music of some artistes and it often has a stylistic significance of comic effect or entertainment.

Analysis of New Yoruba Idioms and Idiomatic Expressions used in Sociopolitical Context

This section is devoted to analyzing and interpreting idioms and idiomatic expressions found in the data collected for this paper. This analysis is to provide insight into communicative and stylistic relevance of the new idioms. Because of the possibility of new idioms and idiomatic expressions possessing many interpretations and the fact that meaning cannot be determined by their individual lexical constituents, this phenomenon is better studied and analyzed from pragmatic and stylistic perspectives with a view to determined their communicative potential in political discourses.

(i) - Eté
Literal meaning: You have only seen little.
Idiomatic meaning: Greater show awaits you/that is just a tip of the iceberg.

The above expression rendered in Ibarapa dialect is often found in the adverts, addresses and speeches of politicians or even, in music of some artistes and it often has a stylistic significance of comic effect or entertainment.

The underlined word in the above excerpt is borrowed from the Oke-Ogun dialect of Yoruba. In standard Yoruba, the word should have appeared thus:

E e ti i ri mkken kan (You have not seen anything)

The above expression rendered in Ibarapa dialect is often found in the adverts, addresses and speeches of politicians or even, in music of some artistes and it often has a stylistic significance of comic effect or entertainment.
comprises Ọṣàkì, Ìṣeyìn, Baba òdè, Ọṣèpètèrì and some parts of Kwara State, especially Ìlọrin, where Ìyá Àlálùkè hails from. The standard form of èkèn is èèkan (once again/more). It is used contemptuously by the opposition party to mean ‘he will never win again’. Apart from its idiomatic connotation, it also has humorous and entertainment effects.

(iv) - ‘Ô bọjé tì’
Literal meaning:  It would never retrogress or go backward
Idiomatic:  Positive assertion/sloganeering for support, collective action for good governance/project

The expression ‘Ô bọjé tì’, literally interpreted as ‘it would not retrogress or go backward’ is a refrain to the political sloganeering of a political party in the southwestern part of Nigeria. The governor of a particular State in Nigeria is fond of saying ‘Èkò o ní bájè o’ (Lagos will not be backward/destroyed) the response or refrain of which is ‘Ô bọjé tì’ (it would not retrogress or go backward). The governor uses the expression which has become a household idiom in the State, to solicit the support of the people, for the various developmental programmes of his government. In some other States, there are similar political expressions or slogans which have become idiomatic expressions that are meant to sensitize people to the activities of government. In one of these States, during the tenure of the former governor, the sloganeering idiom was ‘Oyin nì o’.

(v) - Oyin nì o’
Literal meaning:  It is honey/shortened of name of Oyinlọlá
Idiomatic:  Successful tenure

The expression Oyin nì o, is used not only as an appellation, but also as a slogan during the political campaign of a politician whose name and tenure are expected to be as sweet as honey. This politician’s tenure as governor was metaphorically predicated as oyin (honey) during an election in his State compared to the hardship experienced by the people of the State under the immediate past governor, whose tenure was characterized by mass retrenchment of teachers. As a metaphor, the expression oyin nì o (it is honey) means someone whose name and tenure are expected to be as sweet as honey. The expression is used to hail the former Governor of a particular State in Nigeria, who always got excited and entertained on hearing oyin nì o. This attribute is interpreted based on the socio-political context and in the socio-political views of some people in that particular State as sweet tenure, soothing tenure or a tenure that brings succour. In other words, the context of its usage always provides information which enables people to give the expression an interpretation of a peaceful and prosperous tenure. In another State today, the sloganeering expression is:

(vi) - Àjùmọ̀ṣe
Literal meaning:  Collective implementation
Idiomatic meaning:  Governance is a collective responsibility

The above is a slogan-turned idiomatic expression used virtually in every home and public place thus:

‘k'Oyọọ̀lè dàà àjùmọ̀ṣe gbogbo wa nì o!’  (for Oyo to be peaceful and prosperous it is our collective responsibilities).

The word ‘Àjùmọ̀ṣe’ in the sloganeering idiom is derived from the governor's name ‘Ajímọ̀bi meaning ‘together we woke up to know the manner of birth’. The idiom, Àjùmọ̀ṣe (that-which-is-executed-collectively) shares the same derivational strategy with the first three syllable (À/jí/mò) in the name Ajímọ̀bi (a person we woke up together to experience his birth) with another connotative meaning of 'collective effort' derived from the first syllable and vowel (A) in the two names, a first person plural pronoun which eventually expresses 'collective responsibility'. Today, whether on the television or radio, every advert placed by the Oyo State government is ended with k'Oyọọ̀lè dàà àjùmọ̀ṣe gbogbo wa nì o!’ (for Oyo to be peaceful and prosperous, it is our collective responsibilities). The sloganeering has equally become a household expression with the meaning of 'collective responsibility'; even governance is said to be collective responsibility.

(vii) - Nàìjá
Literal meaning:  Yorubanized and shortened of the name Nigeria
Idiomatic:  Affectionate way of addressing the country Nigeria

The expression ‘Nàìjá’ is also a new idiom that is frequently used by many Nigerians, especially for entertainment purposes. It has become a way of affectionately referring to the country, Nigeria and Nigerians, especially those abroad. Expression like ‘ǐgbàwọ̀ lọ̀ ìbò Nàìjá?’ (when are you going to Nàìjá?)  ‘ṣé o tì gbó láàti Nàìjá? (have you heard from Nàìjá?), ‘Nàìjá lọda’ (Nàìjá is the real thing) are common expressions among Nigerians, especially during a football match between Nigeria and any other country. Whenever it is used in contexts such as the foregoing, it facilitates information or background that connotes an expression of unity among Nigerians as far as the meaning is concerned. There are also Nigerian musicians, actors, actresses, comedians and youths who have chosen Nàìjá as their affectionate way to address their country and sometimes to express exclamatory words of disappointment. When something crazy happens in the polity, people always exclaim Haà, Nàìjá!: Nàìjá is a created word pronounced in Yorùbá or Pidgin English. It is a name given to Nigeria by Nigerians. It has resonated very well with the educated, semi-educated and the illiterates.

(viii) - Kári go/Kári koímá
Literal meaning: Go away/move away
Idiomatic: Continue/you are not wanted

These are new idioms loaned from English. The original English words were correctly used in their Yorùbá form ‘kári go’ and ‘kári koímá’ under different political contexts to connote different meanings. For instance, during the 2003 gubernatorial election in Nigeria the association of market women in a particular State told the former governor of the State in one of his political rallies to kári go. That is, his candidature is accepted by the people, therefore, he should continue with his ambition to contest as they (the electorate) are solidly behind him. The same year, in another political campaigns/rallies in one of the strongholds of his opponent, he was asked to kári go by the supporters of his opponent. Here, the expression was aided by the body language that connotes ‘go away’, ‘you have overstayed’, ‘enough is enough’, ‘you are not wanted any more’. It should be stressed here also that, interpretation of these new idioms are made possible with their various contexts of usage including the extra contextual use of the body language which also aids the understanding of the idiom. In another context, the same candidate was told to kári koímá by his supporters during one of his political campaigns in 2003. ‘Kári koímá means come and govern, people want you.

Literal meaning: Eat into the pocket
Idiomatic: Enrich your pocket

(x) - Jẹun sókè
Literal meaning: Eat into the upper stomach
Idiomatic: Move on/go on Expressions such as the ones above are foregrounded because they are idiomatic. Their meanings cannot be derived from each of their lexical components. Expressions such as these are not allowed in standard Yorùbá because they are semantically deviant. These items are frequently used to describe fraudulent tendencies of some politicians. For instance, in 'Ọmọ Gómini’ (Governor's Child), a film produced and directed by Aṣùtù Láníyàn, a character called Oṣùọlálé uses the expression in a discussion with his friend Akinbò to portray politicians as fraudulent and corrupt individuals when complaining about shortage of money in circulation thus:

Akinbò: Oṣùọlálé, njè o rántí san owó egbẹ tẹ̀rẹ̀ fún akọwé egbẹ kí o to kúró ninú ipadé.

Akinbò: Oṣùọlálé, did you remember to pay your own association money to the secretary before you left the meeting

Oṣùọlálé: What exactly are you saying? Where do you expect me to get money? It is like the politicians have packed all the money in circulation. They are just enriching their pockets.

The underlined expression, which literally means ‘eat into the pocket,’ can be interpreted as “our politicians are just enriching themselves with public funds”. This interpretation is arrived at because of the political information expressed in the context which gives clue to the comprehension of the excerpt. In a similar vein, the expression ‘jeun sókè’ for “move/go on” can be used in different contexts. Let's consider the example below:

Ọkè ni A.C.N wá ninú ìwé ìdìbò yẹn,

Ọkè ni kí è jeun sí

The A.C.N is located at the uppermost position in the ballot paper, eat into the upper stomach.

The excerpt is credited to the incumbent governor of Lagos State, Babátúndé Rájí Fáṣọlá (BRF) during one of the political rallies of his party (Action Congress of Nigeria) held on the 5th of March 2011 at the Tááfáwà Báléwà Square (TBS) Lagos State. The rally was covered by the Lagos Television (L.T.V) and T.V Continental (TVC). The underlined expression is idiomatic and requires socio-political information, as reflected in the context such as the above for a meaningful interpretation. It is abnormal to eat into the upper stomach (jeun sókè). Eat into the stomach (jeun síkún) is the normal way of saying it. However, in this context, the expression is embedded with the socio-political meaning of ‘cast your vote for the A.C.N’, whose logo and name appear in the upper part of the ballot paper. The Governor is trying to educate his supporters on where to cast their votes, that is, the position of the party logo on the ballot paper. This idiom elicits laughter. Consequently, the mammoth crowd who found joy, happiness and entertainment in the use of the expression ‘Ọkè ni kí è jeun sí’ (eat into the upper stomach) could not hide their feelings as Fáṣọlá himself was hailed and adored.

Findings

In this paper, we discovered that new Yoruba idioms and idiomatic expressions were found to be used to express certain sociopolitical issues in Nigeria, especially in some part of western Nigeria. These political issues were expressed in a special and unique ways in the following sociopolitical contexts: 'Eté’ (name of a politician) for corruption/stealing; Ojúyobó (physical description of a politician) for under achiever; Yóó wọ́lẹ̀ ẹ̀ken sì (He would win once again) for deceit; Ō bọ́jẹ́ tì (It would never regress or go backward) for collective support; Oyin ni o (It is honey) for a successful tenure; Ajímọ́bi/Ajúmọse (a politician’s name) for collective responsibility; Nàìjá (pidgin name for Nigeria) for affection/disappointment and Kárí go/Kárí kọọ́mù (carry go/carry come) for continuity and discontinuity.

Nominalisation, pidginisation and dialect expressions were the strategies employed for the formation of new idioms in this paper. These strategies were used to express different political happenings contextualized in underachievement, sloganeering for support, deceit and acceptance/rejection for second term in office respectively.

New idioms and idiomatic expressions, used to express sociopolitical issues in Yorùbá routine communication, occurred in mediated and non-mediated contexts and were conveyed through nominalization, pidginisation, and dialect expressions. These idioms reflect dynamism and modernity-constrained stylistic choices in Yorùbá.

Conclusion
New idioms and idiomatic expressions are quintessentially unique expressions, mostly used in a special and peculiar way when viewed from communicative and stylistic perspective. We therefore, conclude from the foregoing, especially the linguistic strategies involved in the formation of the new idioms and idiomatic expressions, that in spite of the globalisation, which imposes new global communicative challenges on the people, especially the politicians and their followers, the Yorùbá language has the mechanism to cope with such communicative exigencies. The evolution of the new idioms and idiomatic expressions thus becomes a coping strategy to meet the new challenges.
