Communicating Non Verbal Impressions: Perspectives on the Exposed Feminine Cleavage

Abstract

Every day, people communicate millions of spoken and unspoken messages. Among the unspoken messages or non verbal messages is the exposed cleavage. For anybody that sizes up a lady, the eyes naturally go to any exposed cleavage. Attraction or attention appears instant. The question therefore is: why the trend of women exposing their cleavage with skintight blouses or dresses? If the goal of ladies who expose their cleavages is to attract attention, then the exposed feminine cleavage, with its attention grabbing quality, could work like magic. This study sought to establish the predominant impressions created by the non-verbal message of the exposed feminine cleavage. Two qualitative research designs – Focus Group Discussion and In-depth Interviews – were used to study 'beholders' perceptions of the exposed feminine cleavage. The results of the study established the message of the exposed cleavage as attention capturing and seductive. Moderation in dressing was recommended by the study so that the incidents of rape and sexual harassments associated with suggestive dressing would be reined in.

Keywords: Non verbal impressions, exposed feminine cleavage, attention grabbing, non-verbal message

1. Introduction

Every day, people communicate millions of messages. Some messages are obvious, others are not; some are intentional, others are not intentional; some are spoken (verbal), others are not spoken (non- verbal). Non verbal communication according to Keegan (2012) is talking without speaking a word. It appears very effective. Just as the saying goes, "Actions speak louder than words."

Non verbal communication is usually understood as the process of communication through sending and receiving wordless (mostly visual) messages. Such messages can be communicated through gestures and touch (haptic communication); by body language or posture, by facial expression and eye contact, or through artifacts (such as clothing, hair styles or architecture).

One of the most common forms of non verbal communication is clothing (Yammiyavar, Clemmensen & Kumar 2008). Clothing could really be communicative because the kind of clothing that people put on, very often are used to assess them rightly or wrongly; or even tell their personality or identity. Clothing is associated with fashion. Fashion is a general term for a popular style or practice (Fashion, 2012). The idea of dressing with the cleavage exposed appears primarily rooted in fashion. For instance, why would Nigerian actress, Cossy Orjiakor, appear in this dress that fully exposes her cleavage and boobs?

Again, why would, tennis star, Serena Williams, show the world us how wonderfully endowed she is, by exposing her cleavage?

Similarly, why would German Chancellor, Angela Merkel appear, here in public, putting on a dress that fully exposes her cleavage?

Brett (2012) holds that "many women have cottoned on to the innate power of the simple act of showing a bit of chest flesh. And, while the fairer sex is not exactly sure what chemical reactions are sparked in the minds of men at the mere sight of a little décolletage, nevertheless over time they've learnt one vital life lesson: a little cleavage goes a long way". This suggests that the exposed feminine cleavage apparently sends a message.

It would appear that a substantial aspect of our communication is non verbal; from handshakes, gaze, gesture, hair style, to what we put on. Non verbal details, to a reasonable extent, reveal what or who we are and influence how we relate to other people. Among the form of clothing that are extremely communicative are clothing fashioned to expose the cleavage. Since such clothing does not make spoken sounds it will therefore not be out of place to reason that the exposed cleavage is undoubtedly a form of non verbal communication.

It is not uncommon therefore that ladies are often seen indoors, at events, the media, schools, work places and on the streets dressed like this Nigerian Sun Newspaper SUN Girl:

According to Brett (2012), the very word, "cleavage", (let alone the image), goes right to the jugular, sending shivers straight to the minds and loins of men the world over, conjuring up all sorts of conflicting thoughts and scintillating fantasies.

Cleavage, simply defined, is the space between a woman's breasts that can be seen above a dress that does not completely cover them (Oxford Dictionary, 2012).

Cleavage exposure entails, essentially, the act of dressing in such a way that there will be a low cut neckline that exposes the neck, shoulders but more often a small portion or major parts of the breast. This act of dressing whether done intentionally or unintentionally appears to embody non verbal messages that could elicit some form of responses from people presented with the stimulus. Perceptions of these messages might go the gamut of the trend in fashion to that of indecency.

Some people regard the exposed cleavage as a form of feminine flirting or seduction, within the confines of community, peer group and personal standards of modesty, as much as for its aesthetic or erotic effect. Some other people derive erotic pleasure from seeing a woman's cleavage. Some derive pleasure in their female partner exposing the cleavage, and some women wear low-cut clothing for the pleasure of their partner. Some people are uncomfortable with the sight of a woman's cleavage, or object to low-cut clothing for modesty or other reasons (Lott, 2006).

Brett (2012) suggests that a bit of bosom on show does something more powerful and more intoxicating to men than any conversation, expensive gift or home-cooked meal. Whatever the motive of the woman who dresses in clothing exposing her cleavage, beholders of such a person get some kind of non-verbal message. What is this message?

2. Purpose of the Study

The main purpose of our study was to determine the predominant perceptions, among select adult Nigerians, on the exposed feminine cleavage. This thrust led us to seek answers to the following questions:

- 1. How sexually connotative is the exposed feminine cleavage to Nigerians adults?
- 2. How does the Nigerian adult associate the exposed feminine cleavage with fashion?
- 3. In what regard does the Nigerian adult see the connotation of immorality in the exposed feminine cleavage?
- 4. What note of disapproval exists against exposing the feminine cleavage among these Nigerians?
- 5. How permissible is feminine cleavage exposure to Nigerian adults?

3. Perspectives on Cleavage Exposure

The cleavage in anatomically terms is the inter-mammary cleft or the inter-mammary space between a woman's breasts which lies over the sternum (Tvaraj, 2014).

Historically, women's breasts are synonymous with feminineness. This would imply that well-endowed women often use the cleavage as a sort of physical attraction or sexual allure for the opposite sex. It would appear, therefore, that men derive erotic pleasure at the sight of cleavages displayed with aesthetic effect (Tvaraj, 2014).

The sexual objectification of women creates certain impressions in the minds of men, which invariably influence their expectations regarding interaction with women. This is more so when objectifying representation appears to turn the female body into a willing target for male sexual lust (Muehlenkamp & Saris-Baglama, 2002; Shields, 1990; Slater, 2002 & Spitzack, 1999.)

Sexual objectification of women constructs women as objects for the viewing pleasure, sexual lust and desire of men (Berger, 1972; Fredrickson & Roberts, 1997; Kuhn, 1985; LeMoncheck, 1985; Spitzack, 1999).

Shields (1990) opines that objectifying images show women to be little more than their exposed body parts, seductive appearance, and tempting behavior, at the same time that their entire demeanor projects sensuality and an eager willingness to consent to all men's sexual advances at all times.

In Western cultures feminine sensuality by way of objectification is commonplace (Frith, Shaw & Cheng, 2005; Reichert, Lambiase, Carstarphen, & Zavoina, 1999; Slater, 2002).

Women's body-revealing appearance holds a lot of meaning. Men are likely to misconstrue sexual intent in women body revealing wear (Abbey & Melbey, 1986; Johnson, Stockdale, & Saal, 1991; Henningsen, 2004; Abbey & Harnish, 1995; Peter & Valkenburg, 2007).

In Western societies female beauty is constructed almost exclusively in sexual terms. Western media with global reach are replete with sexualized depictions of women in tight body-revealing clothing and exposed body parts that are presented as the very essence of female beauty (Aubrey, 2006; Choma, Foster, & Radford, 2007; Engeln-Maddox, 2006; Frith, Shaw & Cheng, 2005; Reichert, Lambiase, Carstarphen, & Zavoina, 1999).

This culture apparently finds free course in other cultures, whereby the standard feature for feminine attractiveness seem to imply sexualized look – a fashion code that all women are expected to aspire and adhere to (Wood 1999).

Where it seems women lack power and are valued merely on the basis of their appearance, the sexualized look in terms of the exposed cleavage is deemed an asset in the social context (Fredrickson & Roberts, 1997; LeMoncheck, 1985; MacKinnon, 1989; Muehlenkamp & Saris-Baglama, 2002).

The perception of women that they are seen and evaluated by others primarily as per their sexualized bodies and appearance rather than as their internal selves, motivates them to create impressions through sexualized looks in order to gain some self-appraisal (Crane, 2000; Engeln-Maddox, 2006; Fredrickson & Roberts, 1997; Noll & Fredrickson; 1998; Peter & Valkenburg, 2007).

In the world of entertainment, so many female celebrities see cleavage display as their identifying concept. Gracia (2014) sees this fashion trend by female celebrities as immoral.

Morris (2004) states that, though displaying the cleavage can be permissible in many settings, it may be prohibited by dress codes in settings such as work places, churches and schools, where exposure of any part of female body may be considered inappropriate.

In some parts of Africa, disapproving cleavage display depends on how much is exposed and the setting or occasion.

In Nigeria, culture, religion and social background determines people's opinion about cleavage exposure. In predominantly Moslem northern Nigeria, the exposure of any part of the body (more especially attractive organs like the breasts) is highly prohibited. The Islamic faith dictates that a woman's body should never be exposed. This stance also applies to other parts of Nigeria where body revealing is considered decadent and indecent.

According to FitzGerald (1994) and Kross and Harry (1991) women dress in cleavage revealing attire in order to seduce men and convey an interest in sexual advance. This according to them makes them culpable for any subsequent sexual invasions by the men they had allegedly seduced.

4. Method

To answer our research questions, we adopted the Internet Forum Discussion and In-depth Interviews. The blog site of Linda Ikeji, a US-based Nigerian model, was purposively chosen for the discussion posted on it which centred on our subject matter. There were 180 participants in this Internet Forum. Both sexes responded in the discussions even though it was apparent that men were the target of the questions that were posed. The discussions were kick started when Linda asked: "Dear men; do you find the show of cleavage attractive? She further asked: Do you men find showing of too much cleavage attractive? And, concluded with "There has to be a reason why we women do this. Please let us know." These questions were accompanied by the picture in Figure 5.

Based on the rule of theoretical saturation (Creswell, 1998), 25 IDIs among adults (recognized in Nigeria as those who are 18 years and above) were conducted, in terms of five IDI for each of the five states in Southeast Nigeria (Anambra State, Abia State, Enugu State, Ebonyi State and Imo State). The idea of using the southeast region was to give the study a regional hue. The emerging themes from the Internet Forum Discussion and the In-Depth Interviews were used to answer our research questions.

5. Results

About 180 participants made comments on how they perceived the exposed cleavage on the Internet Discussion Forum. Their perceptions went the whole gamut of sexual connotation to the connotation of the permissible. These perceptions were categorized thematically, along the line of the various perceptions, to facilitate interpretation of data. This is as presented in Table 3

32.	The clevage, the urge, the boobs there s time for everything the clevage blows the winds and men chase the winds
33.	Yes open cleavage can be appealing, but only sexually - in a slut-full kind of way. And that is about all the woman brandishing her chest gets out of it most times - sex.

The analysis in Table 1 shows that 49 percent of the comments had the connotation that the exposed cleavage gave the message of sex appeal. Thirty-two percent read the message of indecency, distraction and irritation. Thirteen percent saw it as a permissible, subtle expression that appeals to the imagination. Four percent perceive cleavage exposure as immoral, while just 2 percent reckon it as fashionable. This data analysis would suggest that more often than not, beholders of the exposed cleavage read a sexual message more than any other message. Take these comments, for instance:

"Its just sex appeal"

"its sexy and i love peeping n stretchn 2 get a glance"

"Yes open cleavage can be appealing, but only sexually - in a slut-full kind of way. And that is about all the woman brandishing her chest gets out of it most times – sex"

"looking at ladies exposing their c levage or any part that can excite a man makes me want to have such women at all cost but with no responsibility attached"

"A little show of cleavage goes a looong way! It kepts us guessing, imagining, wondering and wanting!"

From the foregoing highlights, the connotation of the perception of sexual allurement appears to be the predominant non verbal message behind the exposed cleavage.

5.1. In depth Interviews

The In depth Interviews were meant as a rapid assessment of views on the exposed cleavage. In line with this goal, 25 IDIs were conducted with purposively selected adults in the capital cities of the five states in southeast Nigeria. These adults understood the purpose of our study and had consented to their names being mentioned in our report. Some of the highlights relevant to our research questions are as follows:

Mary Akpan, 300 level economics undergraduate, Nnamdi Azikiwe University, Awka,: This interviewee understood what the term cleavage exposure meant. She read cleavage exposure as also breast exposure – the act of dressing to flaunt the boobs. To her, this act is a form of non-verbal communication because there is an intention. In explaining her perception of that, she said she does not dress that way. Besides, it is a deliberate means of attracting the opposite sex. She was of the view that cleavage exposure is an indecent trend in fashion. On the cultural implications of dressing with the cleavage exposed, she opined that "it depends on the culture. "In my culture (Calabar) for instance, during some of our festivals, girls wear tops that either flaunt the boobs or leaves it bare it. But in some culture, it is prohibited," she said. She appeared not to see cleavage exposure as so much of a problem since, in her words "the society is already corrupt and that [cleavage exposure] is not the only indecent thing done" (IDI, female respondent, Awka, Anambra State).

Rev. Sis. Maureen Ibeh, an Enugu based nurse: This respondent was knowledgeable about the subject. In explaining cleavage exposure, she said "it is a dirty and satanic mode of dressing that leaves the breast exposed." Asked if she sees the exposed cleavage as non-verbal communication, she answered in the affirmative by quoting the scripture, "by their fruits you shall know them." She opined that, as a form of communication, a dress that exposes the cleavage tells who the person wearing it is, without the person talking". She further stated that "people who dress like that do so basically to attract the opposite sex, and to identify with the crowd; it [is]an indecent trend in fashion. When shown pictures of ladies with cleavages exposed, she frowned, made the sign of the cross and said "merely seeing these useless girls, you will know the world is corrupt". On the cultural implications of cleavage exposure, the Rev. Sister said, "in my culture (she is from Eziagu, Enugu State), it is a taboo frowned at; it is a dressing style borrowed from films and Westerners." Additionally, she said, "religiously, also, it is bad; it is evil and unholy in God's sight for a woman to expose her body which is a temple of the living God" (IDI, female respondent, Enugu, Enugu State).

Mr. Ikechukwu Nwakali, a university student: This interviewee understood what the term cleavage exposure meant. He was of the view that "The cleavage is said to be exposed, when she exposes her boobs to entice or attract the opposite sex to be assumed sexy." He saw the exposed cleavage as a form of non verbal communication, "course, the truth is that she who exposes her boobs has a motive. So that motive, she believes must not be voiced with talking. But to me cleavage exposure, communicates a person's moral values". Asked what he thought about the salient message behind the exposed cleavage, he said "I think it is madness, indecency. To me the message of this devilish act is unholy. A girl who exposes her boobs only seeks for whom to entice. Moreover, she is more or less communicating how worthless she is." When shown the pictures of ladies with exposed cleavages, he said "this is exactly what we are saying. When I see people like this, as a man I either get angry or disgusted. I see the girl wants something naughty." On whether he saw the exposed cleavage as the trend in fashion or as indecency? He answered, "I see it as both; the society is dirty already. So this mode of dressing only describes how wild, it has gone" (IDI, male respondent, Abakaliki, Ebonyi State).

Iwuji Ihuoma, a civil servant: (This respondent had been monitored for some time by one of us who had noticed that most of her dresses expose her cleavage). This respondent knows and understands what cleavage exposure is. In explaining what it means, she said, it means exposing the upper part of the breasts, not necessarily the whole breasts. To her also, it is a form of non-verbal communication if done intentionally. When she was asked her perception on this issue, she said, "I expose my cleavage to a reasonable extent, but it depends on the weather, the circumstances, situation or occasion. So I see nothing crucifying about it". When asked how she feels at pictures of the exposed cleavage, she said, 'I only frown at a lady if she doesn't have a good one and still flaunts it. To me it shows how good looking and sexy a lady's body is. Even in the past, women were not known for completely covering their bodies. So my dear, if you have got a good one like mine, flaunt it and attract people" On the question of the exposed cleavage being a fashion or trend, she said, "It is the trend in fashion, it is only inappropriate when you dress in a way that pumps out almost the whole breasts". On the cultural implications she said, "This is a free world. You are free to talk, or dress the way you wish. People should learn how to mind their business. To me the only person who she should frown at my dressing is my boss; after all he pays me" (IDI, female respondent, Umuahia, Abia State).

Mr. Chuks Udensi, an Owerri-based banker: This respondent was much knowledgeable about the subject matter. He even said he had longed for an opportunity to discuss it. In his words, "My dear you are doing a good job, this is really a menace that has become nothing else, but madness." In explaining cleavage exposure as a form of non-verbal communication he said, "The truth is that this act passes a sexual message, voices out a woman's power. When asked his personal view on the issue, he said, "Girls do this to capture attention and to get favor (most times unmerited). To me it is repulsive because that of course is not the best way to show your strength as a woman". When asked how he feels at pictures of exposed cleavage, he said "this kind of thing when seen by any man passes a sexual signal down his spine, but when it happens to me, instantly I remove myself that this woman is only seeking for whom to destroy. On the issue of the exposed cleavage as indecent or a trend in fashion, he said "it depends on the culture; in places like Jamaica where the morality level is low, there is nothing wrong with it. It is gradually becoming a norm also, here, because it is seen every day. But the truth is that no matter how bad it has become, some culture still frown at it because it increases the high rate of rape and sexual harassment" (IDI, male respondent, Owerri, Imo State).

From the IDIs, there is the picture that there is a message behind the exposed cleavage. The following lines are reflective of this:

"this act is a form of non-verbal communication because there is an intention"

"she who exposes her boobs has a motive"

"A girl who exposes her boobs only seeks for whom to entice"

Also, the emerging trends from the IDIs seem to agree with the trends already established from the Internet Forum Discussion. The common trends are as follows:

The sexual:

"it is a deliberate means of attracting the opposite sex"

"The cleavage is said to be exposed, when she exposes her boobs to entice or attract the opposite sex to be assumed sexy."

"people who dress like that do so basically to attract the opposite sex"

"the truth is that this act passes a sexual message, voices out a woman's power.

"Girls do this to capture attention and to get favor (most times unmerited)"

"this kind of thing when seen by any man passes a sexual signal down his spine"

The fashionable:

"it [is] an indecent trend in fashion"

"It is the trend in fashion"

"it is only inappropriate when you dress in a way that pumps out almost the whole breasts".

The Immoral:

it is evil and unholy in God's sight for a woman to expose her body which is a temple of the living God.

"To me the message of this devilish act is unholy"

The disapproving:

"I think it is madness; indecency"

The permissible:

"to identify with the crowd"

"I expose my cleavage to a reasonable extent, but it depends on the weather, the circumstances, situation or occasion. So I see nothing crucifying about it"

"I only frown at a lady if she doesn't have a good one and still flaunts it. To me it shows how good looking and sexy a lady's body is. Even in the past, women were not known for completely covering their bodies. So my dear, if you have got a good one like mine, flaunt it and attract people"

Here, just as in the analysis from the Internet Forum Discussion, sexual connotation appears to predominate as the main message of the exposed cleavage. We, therefore, conclude that the exposed cleavage is largely perceived as having a sexual connotation.

6. Conclusion and Recommendation

The overall picture from our study suggests that cleavage exposure is connected to the goal of grabbing attention in a sexually suggestive way. This agrees with Fitz Gerald (1994) and Kross and Harry (1991) that women dress in cleavage revealing attire in order to seduce men and convey an interest in sexual advance.

Having established that cleavage exposure excites sexual allurement, there is the need to emphasize moderation in dressing among our female folk so that the moral poverty of the Nigerian society could be reined in. This is more so, since sexualized looks could lead to rape and other forms of sexual harassments.

	Linda this one pass showing of cleavage o! her entire boobs are on display and her nipples can be clearly seen too. I love her boobs though and wish mine were that sexy but I wouldn't show mine that way at all, liver no go gree me, lol. I do love to show cleavage but in a subtle tasteful manner that leaves a lot to the imaginationand truth is I do it mostly for me, cos I absolutely love seeing the boobs coming together in such a sexy way that makes guys drool and ogle, this one here is tacky but I fancy most guys would get an instant erection at he sight if this, lol July 24, 2012 4:37 PM its disgusting, debassing and shows a great disrespect for ur body. Ur body is supposed to be the temple of the holy spirita holy dwelling place for the lord and u descrate it and objectify itlike a mere sexual object. Please ladies stop this evil, its leading a lot of men to sin and promoting the pornography industryu wont understand the spiritual implication of baring ur God given goods to sexually

	I do not find the show of cleavage attractive because I see all humans as the product of a genetic lottery,I am attracted to what is inside a womans mind,spirit,psyche and being because that is what determines our future.Cleavage may be catchy but what attracts me is character more than anything else because aging ,disease,child-birth can take the breasts away, only character and the qualitative state of mind and spirituality would stand the test of time. 	My two cents on this matter:
	A little show of cleavage goes a looong way! It kepts us guessing, imagining, wondering and wanting! And since its just a little bit showing, we are still able to take our eyes off y'alls chests long enough to look at ur face and have a meaningful conversation with your facenot your chest!
	On the other hand, a lotta cleavage is a definite turn off for MOST decent, self respecting men. Its a signal that this person is an attention grabber and is indecent and only good for one thing- sexfor which we would probably have to pay!
	All that said however, I have a theory that these kinda chicks who over-expose their cleavage are not doing it to attract men. I believe they do it to show their fellow women how well endowed they are. Its like they're saying "Yo! Look what I've got that you dont! Eat your hearts out heifers!"
	Thats my two centsor kobo as the case may be.

177.	It is not good for a woman to display her body for the public to see. So what does she have for her husband? This often cause men to run after the lady and start giving her his call card (even if he has seen that she is married)because he wants to taste the apples. Immodest dressing is for ladies who have got nothing to offer! A lady who knows what she worth does not dress to impress anybody or attract any kind of unnecessary attention from the menfolk! 	I have real big boobs, I love to show cleavage but not to the extent of putting my whole mammary glands on show! When I was younger I was more daring. I am a very confident woman and carry my boobs as they are not there. This picture, I must say exposes everything. That dress will not be as revealing if it was a smaller boobed babe wearing it. Just a little skin. July 25, 2012 7:43 PM 🗐

	I think just a little bit of cleavage tastefully done aint soo bad. Depending on where ur going too. A whole lot of boob exposure all over the place is a no no,trashy n very sluttish! Just not appropriate n decent. July 25, 2012 8:11 PM 🗇

	First impression always matters. As a guy when I see a lady that's decently dressed, I arrage masef and watch wat I say cos I wud want her to carry me as she carry's hersef. There's no satisfaction in looking at a woman's cleavage or her ass. It just heightens ur desire to take her to bed and screw the hell out of her. When u're done, the mirage disappears. I wudn't mind anada man's wife, sister, or daughter advertise her cleavage to me but I wud neva let ma wife or daughter do such. July 25, 2012 10:36 PM

	Yes open cleavage can be appealing, but only sexually - in a slut-full kind of way. And that is about all the woman brandishing her chest gets out of it most times - sex. Don't know so many men who want to have a stable relationship with or marry a woman and have her bear her chest. My advice for women who bear their cleavage, if you are not a slot, don't advertise like one, cos many men will treat you as a mere sex tool. July 26, 2012 8:45 AM 🗇
